

ELYAHOU LALLOUZ IS ON A QUEST TO 'PAINT FOR PANACEA' AUCTIONS "PATRIOT" FOR THE HOMELESS

This month's auction is dedicated to all the men and women overseas, engaged in combat for the survival of a liberated Iraq and a peaceful America. The trauma that has encompassed our country is one that is filled with much emotional distress. Generally when people engage in a dual or some sort of battle, there are rules and guidelines to adhere to. But this game is a very different one; it is a battle of blindness that knows no rules, knows no kindness, knows no compassion. The opposition yearns for the souls of the youth that courageously face its demonocracy. Everyone aspires to a life of longevity, a life of peace filled with good health and prosperity. But for the young women and men who so bravely fight this war, we are greatly indebted to them and their families. We look forward to their safe and victorious return.

There is no bias in this article, but one that wills compassion to all the victims who are so helplessly lost amidst this turmoil; Iraqi and American, for virtue finds itself standing side by side. Contrasting teams abandoned in a path of terror, left vulnerable to finality; a finality that will eradicate war and grace our nation and its neighboring countries with enduring peace.

Renowned Artist and Philanthropist, Elyahou Lallouz's Original Painting entitled, "Patriot", is a symbol of perpetual heroism unto the American nation. Lallouz shares, "I commiserate with the sufferance of war, but the settling of these International disputes cannot be grounds for disregarding what is happening in our own backyard. Homelessness is not a choice, it is a lamentable circumstance. Supporting people in a way that we would want to be aided in our time of dire need, is something that everyone should ponder. I paint for a nation in pain. I 'Paint for Panacea'. My art is the bridge for this journey."

Last month, Lallouz was nominated for Encore Awards' category of 'Individual Leadership' as well as the Community Foundation of Broward for the prestigious 'Moretti Award' for Artistic Achievement. When asked how he felt about these nominations, Lallouz replied, "It is quite the honor to have been listed among Broward's finest."

Homeless Voice caught up with Elyahou Lallouz at last month's 'Taste of the Nation' which took place at the Broward Convention Center, where two of his pieces were auctioned off handsomely. Proceeds supported local agencies involved in hunger relief and other humanitarian services.

But one participant stood out to Lallouz, amongst the crowd. That of Andrew Lampasone of Linsoni International, a family operated business with the finest wines available. When asked why Lampasone, Lallouz replied, "The Lampasone's wine tasting station was that where no notice was taken as to the content of the bottle as much as who was serving it. This is a toss up of Lampasone versus Linsoni. You just can't lose!"
